

NGC Membership
Monday

Meeting Magic

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide
- The right of the minority to be heard

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide
- The right of the minority to be heard
- The rights of individual members

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide
- The right of the minority to be heard
- The rights of individual members
- The rights of absentees

Know Your Rules

Know your rules & regulations –

Robert's Rules is your default if it is designated as your parliamentary authority

Your bylaws supersede Robert's

Quorum

Quorum – allows business to be conducted

Don't confuse with voting strength

Bylaws

Bylaws – foundational rules – rules that aren't meant to be changed easily

BYLAWS – NOT BY-LAWS

a hyphen is for in-laws not
bylaws

Don't ignore your bylaws
that are broken – fix them

Generally review at least every FIVE years

NEVER legislate for or against an individual

Standing Rules

Standing Rules are rules that may need to be suspended or changed easily

Add standing rules freely –
in a difficult situation you can stand behind them

Bylaws are foundational

Standing Rules are administrative

Policy

Policy – sometimes used interchangeably with
Standing Rules

Policy is not mentioned in Robert's but in general, policy is your “motherhood” statements or platforms

For example – ABC Garden Club encourages planting the right tree in the right place.

ABC Garden Club strongly advocates for the conservation of our natural resources.

If your group has policy then
be sure to have “the teeth” described (how to amend)

Procedures

Procedures are the “how to” of the job.

Be sure procedures
are NOT in your bylaws or standing rules

And that most dreaded of all
rules...

The hardest to change...

The most entrenched of any...

The Way We've ALWAYS Done It

Custom

Review your bylaws and standing rules to ensure they reflect “the way we’ve always done it.”

Custom is allowable even if it conflicts with your bylaws
UNTIL it is challenged.

Then you must follow your
bylaws.

Another good reason to review and keep your bylaws current!

NGC
Membership
Monday

Meeting Magic

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide
- The right of the minority to be heard

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide
- The right of the minority to be heard
- The rights of individual members

Basic premise of parliamentary procedure is:

- The right of the majority to decide
- The right of the minority to be heard
- The rights of individual members
- The rights of absentees

Know Your Rules

Know your rules & regulations –

Robert's Rules is your default if it is designated as your parliamentary authority

Your bylaws supersede Robert's

Quorum

Quorum – allows business to be conducted

Don't confuse with voting strength

Bylaws

Bylaws – foundational rules –
rules that aren't meant to be changed easily

BYLAWS – NOT BY-LAWS

a hyphen is for in-laws not
bylaws

Don't ignore your bylaws
that are broken – fix them

Generally review at least
every FIVE years

NEVER legislate
for or against an individual

Standing Rules

Standing Rules are rules that may need to be suspended or
changed easily

Add standing rules freely –
in a difficult situation you
can stand behind them

Bylaws are foundational

Standing Rules are administrative

Policy

Policy – sometimes used interchangeably with
Standing Rules

Policy is not mentioned in Robert's but in general, policy is your “motherhood” statements or platforms

For example – ABC Garden Club encourages planting the right tree in the right place.

ABC Garden Club strongly
advocates for the conservation of our natural resources.

If your group has policy then
be sure to have “the teeth”
described (how to amend)

Procedures

Procedures are the “how to” of the job.

Be sure procedures
are NOT in your bylaws or
standing rules

And that most dreaded of all
rules...

The hardest to change...

The most entrenched of any...

The Way We've ALWAYS Done It

Custom

Review your bylaws and standing rules to ensure they reflect “the way we’ve always done it.”

Custom is allowable even if
it conflicts with your bylaws
UNTIL it is challenged.

Then you must follow your
bylaws.

Another good reason to review and keep your bylaws current!